POWERS GUILTY.

One of Gov. Goebel's Murderers Gets a Life Sentence.

Swore Like a Trooper When the Law Deprived Him Of Liberty.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 18.—Caleb Powers is guilty of conspiring to bring about the murder of Gov. Wm. Goebel. So said 12 men of different political faiths to day in a verdict that was arrived at without argument or wrangling in the jury room. Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin concluded his marvelously eloquent and convincing speech at 11:30 this morning, and Court adjourned till 1 o'clock, but it was 1:32 when Judge Cantrill said to the jury:

"Gentlemen, retire and make a verdict."

The jury filed into the east jury room, just behind where Powers, smiling, sat talking with the Misses Dangerfield, two young ladies who had made his acquaintance since the trial began. He seemed the same cold and unconcerned man he had been all during the trial. After the Youtsey case had been called and passed, Judge Cantrill adjourned Court and walked out, instructing the Sheriff that if a verdict was reached to send for him.

THEY WERE READY.

A few minutes after 2 o'clock there was a knocking on the jury room door from the inside. The Sheriff answered the call and immediately hurried out for Judge Cantrill. It was instantly flashed all over the Courtroom that a verdict had been reached. The knowing ones thought they knew that such a quick agreement meant a conviction.

Powers never stopped talking and smiling.

Judge Cantrill returned. "Bring in the jury," he said.

Powers' face then took on a strained, expectant look as the men filed past.

"Gentlemen, are you ready to report?" said the Judge, and Foreman I. G. Stone nodded assent. The verdict was passed up to the Clerk.

"Read the verdict, Mr. Clerk," said Judge Cantrill, and the Clerk read as follows, while all in the room held their breath:

"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty, and fix his punishment at confinement in the State Penitentiary for life." I. G. Stone, Foreman.

"Gentlemen, is that your verdict?" asked Judge Cantrill.

"It is," answered the jury.

POWERS WAS SHOCKED.

Powers was watched closely. He seemed shocked for an instant, and a pained look crept into his cold, pale face; great beads of sweat broke out on his forehead, and for the first time he betrayed nervousness, but it was only for a moment. Regaining his composure, he turned to the Misses Dangerfield and said: "I was not expecting that. The verdict is unjust."

Judge Cantrill thanked the jury for their patience under such a long strain, the Court adjourned and all was over.

There was no sort of demonstration following the verdict, and the vast crowd filed out of the courthouse almost in silence.

GOEBEL'S BROTHER WEPT.

After Court adjourned a very pathetic scene occurred in the west jury room, which has been occupied by attorneys for the prosecution as a conference room. Arthur Goebel, who has devoted himself to all the details of the trial so industriously for months, was almost overcome when he realized that one of the conspirators had been convicted. He stood at the window silently weeping, in striking contrast to what was going on in the opposite jury room. In there Powers had stepped for a few minutes' conference before going back to jail, and he cursed and swore at the jury, the lawyers, the witnesses and everybody. He was in a blind rage and vented his spleen in a most blasphemous way, so said those near enough the door to hear.

PEKIN TAKEN.

Allies Enter the Chinese Capital on the 15th.

Americans Were in the Fight and Were the First to Scale the Wall.

Washington, Aug. 18.—General Yamaguchi wires from Pekin to Tokio, under date of August 16, as follows:

"The allies attacked Pekin early yesterday, opening with artillery on the eastern side. The wall was obstinately held by the enemy."

"The Japanese and Russians were on the northward of the Tung-Chow canal. The Americans and British were on the south side. At nightfall the Japanese blew up the two eastern gates of the Tartar City and entered."

"In the meantime the Americans and British entered the Chinese City by the Tung Pien gates. Detachments of each force were sent toward the legations. The parties met near the legations and opened communication. All the Ministers and their staffs were found safe."

"The Japanese loss was over 100 killed, including three officers. The losses of the allies have not been ascertained. Four hundred Chinese were killed."

Americans Took Part.

The dispatch from General Yamaguchi, giving the details of the capture of Pekin, was accepted by the War Department officials as giving the most satisfactory account thus far received. General Yamaguchi is in command of the Fifth Army Corps, with the rank of Major General, and is regarded as one of the fighting Generals of the Japanese army. His report discloses for the first time that the Americans shared in the assault on the city and that they marched with the British troops to the south gate, while the Japanese and Russians operated against the east gate. What was most noticeable in the Japanese report was that the Japanese killed are given at 100 and the Chinese killed at 400.

Heavy Losses Expected.

This makes no account of the wounded, and indicates that when the detailed casualty list is received it will be a heavy one, as the wounded always far exceed the killed. Furthermore, the report states that the loss of the "allies" had not been ascertained. This is the first intimation that there were losses other than those sustained by the Japanese. The entire tenor of the report indicates that the engagement was a fierce one, lasting throughout the day of August 15, as the attack began early in the morning and the blowing up of the gates did not occur until nightfall.

Chaffee Heard From.

Washington, Aug. 20.—News of the rescue of the Ministers at Pekin was confirmed yesterday by the receipt at Washington of a cable message from Maj. Gen. Chaffee, who reports that he entered the legation grounds on the evening of August 14 (believed to be 15th) with the Fourteenth infantry and a light battery. Gen. Chaffee met with resistance, as he says eight men were wounded during the day's fighting. Rear Admiral Remy cables that the telegraph line to Pekin has been interrupted, and that information from Japanese sources says the Empress Dowager is detained in the "inner city," which is being bombarded by the allies. Admiral Remy's message is dated Taku, Aug. 18. A cable message from Rear Admiral Bruce at Chefoo to the British Admiralty, says street fighting still continues in Pekin and part of the city is on fire. He says the Chinese are making their last stand in the "inner city." He also confirms the news of the detention of the Empress Dowager. It is said the next move will probably be the arrangement of an armistice.
